6. Identification and documentation

We are required by law to collect information about and verify an investor's identity prior to issuing them units in a Bennelong fund. The Anti-Money Laundering and Counter-Terrorism Financing Act ('AML/CTF Act') obliges us to collect identification documents and other supporting information to verify the identity of our investors, the source or destination of any payment to or from a fund, or any other purpose pursuant to the AML/CTF Act.

Can ID documents held on file be used?

We can use the identification documents provided by you or your agent for a previous initial application as long as:

- the documentation you supplied to us is still accurate. If any if amendments have been made (e.g. changes to trustees, beneficiaries or beneficial owners), you will need to supply us with the necessary documentation approving the changes; and
- certified identification documentation has not expired.

Note: if the original application and AML documentation we have on file for you is more than five years old, or you are a Politically Exposed Person, we may need you to fill out an Initial application form and supply new AML documentation.

If you wish to clarify whether the identification and supporting documentation we have on file is still accurate and/or has not expired, please contact our Client Experience team using the details on the cover page of this form.
