Bennelong Australian Equities Fund

Performance update
As at 31 January 2019

The Bennelong Australian Equities Fund (the “Fund”) notched up its 10th anniversary at the end of January.

The Fund has been successful in adding value for our clients over time. The Fund has outperformed the market by approximately 3% over the past year and by approximately 3% on average in each year since inception 10 years ago. The Fund is the fifth best performing all-cap Australian equities fund over the last 10 years, according to the most recent Morningstar® Australian Institutional Sector Survey at 31 December 2018 (the best performing over that timeframe has been our Bennelong Concentrated Australian Equities Fund).

The Fund’s outperformance has been relatively consistent over time, as reflected in the following graph of relative outperformance (or alpha) in each financial year since inception.

The last six months have, however, been disappointing in terms of returns. Markets have fallen, but the Fund has also underperformed over this period.

In the 10-year journey managing the Fund so far, we have quite regularly had to manage through tougher times like these. Sticking to the same tried-and-tested process is paramount. To that end, we remain focused on what we believe ultimately drives investor returns over time: earnings, growth prospects and other business fundamentals.

Some stocks such as Aristocrat Leisure that are held in the Fund have been sold down in recent months, sometimes without any material deterioration in business fundamentals. This has affected returns, but in general the lower share prices have set them up from here with more attractive risk-return dynamics.

As usual, the portfolio continues to evolve, reflecting our conviction levels around individual stocks. As we move into reporting season, we are particularly mindful of what we perceive to be significant earnings risk prevalent right across the market. Investors are nowadays brutal when it comes to even minor earnings misses or downgrades.

We have bought or added to stocks where our conviction levels have improved, particularly in relation to near-term earnings prospects. This has included some of the stocks that were sold down in recent months, as well as some stocks with naturally higher earnings certainty such as certain REITs. We have also trimmed or exited stocks where our conviction levels have waned, including some longer held positions.

Overall, we like how the portfolio is currently positioned and we are optimistic on its investment prospects.
